San Diego Jewish Academy Opens Its Doors For Its Annual K-12 Open House

On January 19, San Diego Jewish Academy will welcome the community to explore its beautiful 56-acre campus and speak with faculty and current parents.

San Diego, CA – January 11, 2011 – San Diego Jewish Academy (SDJA) will host its Annual K-12 Open House on Wednesday, January 19, for both prospective parents and current SDJA families. The event will provide an opportunity for parents and students to learn about the school, view classrooms and speak with faculty, staff and administrators.

“People are always curious about our campus and how we teach our students,” said Larry Acheatel, executive director at SDJA. “The open house is a great opportunity for people to meet our outstanding faculty and find out why our school is so special.”

This year, the school introduced the theme of Kavod, or honor and respect, to emphasize ethics in its classrooms and to teach students about the importance of respecting oneself and others. “We always strive to integrate ethics in our curriculum,” continued Acheatel. “This is what differentiates us from other schools. We not only offer outstanding academics; we also provide our students with the tools to become confident, well-rounded individuals who are prepared for life.”

Families interested in learning more about an SDJA education are invited to attend the Prospective Family Reception at 5:30 pm, where there will be campus tours and a complimentary dinner. Both prospective parents and current families will have the opportunity to walk through SDJA’s many classrooms, view a variety of special student projects and speak to faculty and staff.

Reservations are recommended for SDJA’s Prospective Family Reception. Please contact Renee Sherman, director of admissions, at (858) 704-3716 or rsherman@sdja.com to RSVP.
